Seating guide

The seat and side sections of a saddle seat automatically bring you into an upright seated posture and give you support. This relieves pressure on the back and promotes good blood circulation. The nose provides excellent sitting control and allows you to maneuver your stool without hands. The tall rear section gives you additional stability and full control of the stool.

In order to assist you in selecting your rolling stool, we've created a scale that illustrates how well the individual model support your posture.

This makes the transition to "healthy sitting" easy for all the "saddle seat newbies."

The sides end with a flat edge, ensuring maximal range of movement in the chair. The wide seat features comfortable, soft cushioning.

1 The all-rounder:
Rolling stool
Trecking aka Horse III,
Horse IV und Horse V

- /// wide seat for comfortable sitting
- /// slim, high nose and steep sides for excellent mobility
- /// complement with backrest and tilt mechanism

Trecking is the all-rounder amongst the rolling stools. You'll sit very comfortably in the wide seat. The high nose prevents slipping and allows you to steer hands-free. Its pointed shape and steep sides provide your legs a high degree of motion, keeping you very mobile.

Adding a tilt mechanism allows you to tilt the seat forward or backward. This allows you to find your own ideal position.

The optional backrest is generously sized and upholstered in the seat covering. Due to the high centre of gravity, it can be combined only with the large star base. The tilt mechanism for this seat is available at no additional charge.

i Seat made of integral foam: for comfortable sitting

Integral foam is a member of the polyurethane family and offers a soft, porous core and a skin that becomes more solid and hard towards the edges. It is made using the reaction injection moulding technique. The foaming reaction mixture is injected in liquid form into a cold mould, which is completely filled once the foaming reaction is complete.

Skai® Tolaris

Amazing 3D depth effect

The skai® Tolaris EN upholstery covering shimmers in the light depending on the viewing angle. It will also amaze with a fascinating 3D depth effect. This effect is caused by hexagon clusters oriented in various directions that come together to form a rhombus. Each three rhombi form three sides of a cube in the eye of the viewer - the perfect illusion! The sealant accentuates the effect, yet even the soft-touch feel is impressive. A jury selected skai® Tolaris EN as a winner for the 2015 Interior Innovation Award. It also took a spot on the podium for the 2015 red dot award: product design. Finally, it received gold at the 2015 Materialica Design + Technology Award.

Let your salon furniture match your design!

Thanks to skai® digital printing, you can utilise your own design for furniture in limited, small-run, customer-specific projects. With a minimum order of 50 running metres, the premium skai® upholstery covering from Hornsusch can be digitally printed directly at 300 dpi photo quality for this purpose.

The printed faux leather can then be applied to all of the side areas of the chair, wash station, or rolling stool where there is no direct sitting contact. This allows for completely new possibilities in design and marketing.
